As election results came in from across the country on 6 May, now prime minister David Cameron was up until dawn celebrating his 20,000-vote Witney constituency win. The main man spent the small hours celebrating in The River Room, part of the Altitude 360 venue collection, where he gave a stirring speech to the Tory party faithful, as our picture shows. Located a few floors below Conservative Party HQ in Millbank Tower, The River Room can host 650 for a reception and was pretty much fit to burst with Tory members celebrating the end of a hard-fought election campaign.

Coinciding with the huge expansion of Altitude 360, autumn 2009 saw the launch of The River Room, with floor-to-ceiling windows & views of the Thames. This 650-capacity venue boasts a contemporary design, including a water wall with projection facilities & a stylish waterfall bar. A state-of-the-art lighting system is capable of washing the room with a broad palate of colours & myriad effects. The 7,000sq ft venue can be divided into three separate spaces & lends itself just as readily to a glamorous dinner for 500 as a hi-tech meeting for up to 400. Combined with Altitude 360, the venue can now hold up to 1,250 guests, making it London's largest riverside venue.
